To whom it may concern.

I am writing this letter to introduce myself as a Full-stack developer. I am a Renewable Energies Engineer, and while traversing such career I discovered my passion for programming and software development, so I decided to pursue that career right after finishing school. I took one semester of structured programming and recently joined the "Soy Henry" bootcamp, where I learned JavaScript, Typescript, HTML5, CSS3, React.js and Express, among other technologies, in a basic to middle level. I also learned a lot about JavaScript with a Udemy course taught by Web developer/designer and teacher, Jonas Schmedtmann, and a HTML and CSS Udemy course taught by the same person.

I have 800+ coding hours and a couple of personal and freelance projects to back me up as a person who knows the basics to middle level of Web Development. I also have 4 years of working experience in the photovoltaic energy industry, so I know what is like to be in a multidisciplinary team and keep up with deadlines and client expectancy, also, if there's something that defines me is my ability to quick-learning any subject that I put my focus on and that's why I believe I'm a great fit for this job, I really think that if a could have the opportunity to learn and grow personally and professionally alongside senior coworkers I would become a great software engineer and a great asset to the company.

I would be pleased to attend an interview if you would like to discuss my application further.

Yours sincerely, Efraín Chacón.
